Now Live on the Web

Where can you go to see Heather's landscape sketches of Arches, get connected with powerful tools for sharing your faith, read our latest prayer letter online and see David back when he had a fuller head of hair? The answer to all of the above is www.nagyworld.com!

It's been a wish of ours to have a website that would help us share with both friends and support partners what we do and what we're about. This summer and fall, Heather had time to learn a program called Dreamweaver that's used to create websites. And www.nagyworld.com is the result! Check it out, tell us what you think, what you like, or if there's something else you want to see there. We hope this can be a non-threatening way for us (and you!) to share our ministry with other friends.

After completing our website, Heather had a chance to use her new skills to create one for the Global Women's Leadership Forum. It's a conference coming up in the spring for international Crusade staff women to be further developed and encouraged in their work.

TOUCHed

You may remember how we shared last month about TOUCH, a Flash presentation tied to a website (www.whatistouch.org). We were excited to hear from a student at Princeton who sent an instant message that simply said, "OK, I've prayed the prayer. Now what do I do?" A teammate interacted with her as she had more questions, especially about the Holy Spirit. Efforts are being made to connect her to a local movement of Christians, and she continues to email our teammate questions from time to time.

While we know that the TOUCH website has had about 5,500 hits, our chat feature has had less success, so we've discontinued that for now. We know at least 1,600 people forwarded the email to their friends through the website, but are unable to track those who forwarded by email. Much of our job as we innovate involves trying new things, and learning what does and does not work. Many of you had the chance to see TOUCH and send it to your friends. Do you have any stories you can share with us? We'd love to hear them.

"E"opportunities

On another fun note, friends on our team had been emailing and praying for another college student who had visited the website www.everystudent.com (that we help manage). She had many questions which our friends patiently answered. The relationship continued as she struggled to understand and believe in Christ. Our Bible study was praying for her one night, that she would accept Christ into her life. We found out the next day that she accepted Christ that night about the same time we were praying! God is at work when we pray for people to know Him.

Heather and I each have an "e" opportunity. There is a school here in Orlando that is for "at-risk" students (at risk of dropping out, being violent, etc.). The school asked Campus Crusade for email mentors that would write once a week to their students throughout the school year. We look forward to this simple way to encourage a young person and impact their life.

Thanks for your prayers and support!

Heather + David

Praise God that He is still at work drawing people to Himself.

Please pray for those who have made life-changing decisions such as the women we mentioned.

And pray that we would have many more opportunities to be a part of lives being changed.
